Summer Holidays

It is that time of year when, for many of us, our minds turn to summer holidays.

Whether we are escaping to far flung places and the promise of hours of uninterrupted sunshine, sweltering temperatures, and beautiful beaches, or opting to take our chances with the British weather, staying in this country, whilst also being assured that wherever we go we are blessed with a beautiful country with plenty to see and to learn about. For me and the family this year it is a holiday in Northumberland that we are looking forward to.

Wherever we are heading to this summer, there is something about having a rhythm in life, that balance between the time to work and the time to rest, a time for refreshment, a time to step back from the frenetic every day activity of our lives, to see something new, to be absorbed in a different way of being.

For some of us a holiday, is all about, stopping, laying for hours on the beach or by a pool, reading a book, or simply soaking up the sun with the occasional swim to cool down. Others might think that sounds like some sort of torture, they might see a holiday is an opportunity to learn something new, to discover new places, the first thing they do on arriving is to find the pile of leaflets that tell them about all the places just waiting to be visited. Whichever group we are in, or where we sit between the two extremes, simply being away from our normal environment, soaking up something new, is a holiday, it is a break, it is a rest ... as long as we remember to switch off the works mobile and set the out of office email message.

The rhythm of work and rest, is at the heart of our faith as Christians, when God created the world, for 6 days he laboured, and on the 7th day he called a sabbath rest. A time to rest and enjoy the fruits of his labours and an instruction for us to do the same. To take those moments, where we can to stop and to rest.

And so, if you are fortunate enough this summer to be going away on holiday, I hope you enjoy your break away, I hope there is time for refreshment, and time for learning something new and that it provides you with a chance to stop and rest and to simply be.

May God bless you
Heather

Lord of the summer
 We thank you for the many blessing we receive from you
 For the sunshine and warmth
 For times of rest and relaxation
 For harvest time and fruitfulness
 Thank you for sustaining us
 And giving us hope for the future

Amen

MERIEL'S REPORT

I had a rather interesting email recently which I thought was worthy of being shared. To give some background, in 2015 I had some contact with the Revd Dr Simon Bloxam-Rose about our dear Ronnie Blythe. I will copy what I put in the Magazine about it at the time.

OUR LAY READER, RONALD BLYTHE

A few weeks ago our vicar, John, came to our early morning communion service with an email for Ronnie which had been sent to him to pass on. It was such a moving account of what his writings meant to this particular Army Chaplain that I asked permission of the sender and of Ronnie to include it in our Magazine.

I know that Ronnie gets quite a lot of mail about Word from Wormingford but it is lovely to be able to share one small piece and I am so grateful that I was allowed to do just that.

My thanks to the Rev Dr Simon Bloxham-Rose and to our dearly loved Dr Ronald Blythe.

From:	Dr S Bloxam-Rose	To:	vicar@wormingford.com
Sent:	27 February 2015	Subject:	Greetings and thanks RB

Dear John (if I may?)

Please forgive the intrusion, but I want to express through you how much I value the writings of Ronnie Blythe who assists in your parish and how important his musings and other writings are in my spiritual life.

I am an Army Chaplain serving with the 2nd Battalion The Duke of Lancaster's Regiment, based near Blackpool, although I live in the Devonshire village of Stoke Gabriel, near Totness. In 2010 I was on a particularly ghastly tour of Afganistan as the battlegroup chaplain in Helmand Province with the 1st Battalion. It was the most testing period of my life and vocation. Sadly with injuries and PTSD we lost an entire Company. Ronald Blythe's writings just kept me going. I owe him a great debt.

I have subsequently read almost everything that he has published, essays and his works on John Clare included. He'd hate to be called a treasure, but he is a rare jewel and the very best of what can still be found in the English Church.

I once did a little detour to Wormingford on my way to visit one of my lads in the military prison at Colchester. It was good to have seen the church and the environ where I have travelled in my imagination so often. Sadly, I never found Bottengom's!

Would you be kind enough to pass on the thanks and best wishes of a random cleric?

Thank you

With good wishes

Yours sincerely

Simon Bloxam-Rose (Rev Dr)
Chaplain

At the end of May I had another email from the now Canon Simon Bloxam-Rose who is now Deputy Priest in Ordinary to HM the King at the Chapels Royal. The following is our email exchange.

Dear Dr Bloxham-Rose

Yesterday, at our 8 am service my vicar, John, gave me your email about Ronnie , to give to him at our 11 am service which he was taking. I did give it to him, and checked again as he packed his case, but he still managed to leave it in the vestry.

I shall see him on Wednesday as he is coming to lunch so shall give it to him again. I did read him a little of it as he was packing up. I know John has replied to you and am sure Ronnie will – when he sees it. He is not into technology so cannot sent it to him. I am church warden and organist at Little Horkesley Church, in the same benefice as Wormingford, and about which he also writes a great deal.

Your email was such a moving account of how much his writings have meant to you and I would like your permission to include it in my next month's church magazine. I have already asked Ronnie. If you are happy with that I will send you a copy when it comes out.

With Best Wishes

Dear Meriel (if I may?)

I wanted to write to you to say how sorry I was to hear of the death of Ronnie. You and I corresponded a few years ago, and you were kind enough to read my email to him.

Ronnie's writing has meant so much to me over the years. I think I have read just about everything he had ever published.

I do hope this finds you well. I left the Army two years ago on retirement, and spend the time in-between Devon and the Chapels Royal.

With best wishes and cheery greetings

Dear Simon

How good to hear from you and to see that, on your retirement from the army, you now hold that wonderful position at the Chapel Royal. Congratulations.

Yes, our dear Ronnie passed away in January soon after his 100th Birthday. He was at Bottengoms, which he loved, looked after by a wonderful band of people who he called 'his dear ones'. They called themselves 'The Ronnettes' Prior to that care being put in place there was a rota of friends taking in his meals and getting his glass of sherry out. He was always pleased to see you when you called and remembered everything from the past although his short-term memory failed. He still had one beloved cat, Pussycat, which has been rehomed to a wonderful home and is now called Snowdrop.

I thought I would send you our church magazines covering the Birthday, his death and funeral and his Memorial Service. I shall send one with this email and the other two separately. He was a wonderful man and meant so much to us. You will see from the Dec/Jan magazine that I took my small choir to sing to him – hymns that he loved – and he joined in with everything. On the group photo I am the person in the blue anorak looking a bit like a bag lady! He had managed to sign copies of his last book so I have yet another to 'Dear Meriel with love from Ronnie'.

I am still organist at our small church but actually gave up being churchwarden last year after 27 years. My husband gave up being Treasurer after 40 years. We are still, however, doing just as much. As I may have said before Little Horkesley only has about 165 people. I have not lived there since I married 56 years ago but have attended all my life and have been organist since I was 17. Since covid we only have one service each week and average about 25 people which in the pattern of most churches around that is still not too bad. We are now joined with 7 other villages. We still, so far, keep our identity, having mainly Prayer Book Services with psalms, canticles and response, sung.

It really was good to hear from you. I may just mention in my next Magazine, that I had heard from you if that is alright with you.

Best Wishes
Meriel

Dear Meriel

Thank you for such a prompt reply, and the attachments of the parish magazine, including pictures of Ronnie.

I am sitting here next to my mother's bedside with a copy of "Next to Nature". My mother will be 99 in July.

I am thrilled with the photos of Ronnie. I am tempted to print off a couple of them and frame them! I feel inspired to work on the tiny garden of my own cottage.

Thank you so much. I do hope we can keep in touch. You have been so good to the parish and to Ronnie. I am indebted to you.

Cheery greetings
Simon

It is amazing the influence and effect Ronnie had on so many lives.

RONNIE'S PLAQUE

I heard from Ronnie's oldest friend, Alan Cudmore, that a plaque was unveiled at Bottengoms on June 25th. It is alongside the one which was already there for John and Christine Nash. Another tribute to a great man who so many of us called a friend. See report, P23.

EMMA'S LICENSING

Emma Barr has completed her ministry training and on Sunday July 1st she was Licensed at Bishop's Court in Chelmsford. She will be ordained on September 10th at Chelmsford Cathedral.

We offer Emma our love and prayers as she commences her ministry. Initially she will be curate in our six parishes and we so look forward to seeing more of her as the months go by.

BIG CHURCH CELEBRATION AUGUST 20th HAMMONDS FARM

Everyone from the six parishes is invited to an afternoon and evening together, as we celebrate those things in our individual parishes that are distinctive, through workshops and worship, Throughout the afternoon you will be able to access a series of workshops from all the different churches, or rest awhile, sit and enjoy a cup of tea, slice of cake and a chat. At 6 pm we will come together in an act of worship where Bishop Roger will be our Guest Speaker.

We shall end the event with a pulled pork supper. All are welcome. The address of Hammonds Farm – the home of Stephen and Emma Barr - is Hemps Green Fordham CO6 3LS.

ST PAUL'S CATHEDRAL JUNE 18th

As you know our vicar, Heather, had the honour of preaching at the cathedral on June 18th. She did brilliantly. Well done, Heather. The following, her sermon, was posted on the 'Little Horkesley – A church near you' website.

MERIEL

Trinity 6 Year A – Romans 8:1-11; Matt 13:1-9; 18-23

18th June 2023

I am sure you have all heard the saying about optimists and pessimists and how the pessimist will say the glass is half empty, whilst the optimist will say the same glass is half full. You may even have seen the same image of a half full glass of water and know the physicist will argue the glass is indeed full ... one half of liquid/water, the other half of gas/air.

But whether you see the glass as half empty, or half full, is actually quite important. It really matters how we understand that glass.

What if someone asks you to share whatever is in it? What if you wondered whether you were blessed or needy, rich or poor? What about choosing to live gratefully and generously, or resentfully and selfishly?

One perspective (the glass is half empty) easily inspires one way of living; just as the other perspective (it's half full) inspires a radically different way. Yet they are both based on the same objective facts: the same glass, the same stuff. It matters how we see things. The parable Jesus tells us today, has at its heart this notion of perspective, of how we see things.

One place to start is to remember that today, this parable is about us. That is, we are the sowers, we are the ones called to go out and sow, to try to live as our faith calls us to live, to try to share our faith in word and deed with those whom God puts in our path; to share the love of God that is so abundantly given to us.

And that means doing stuff, it means action. It involves reaching out to people; it involves serving and caring and risking ourselves for others. However, if we try to do this, if we try to offer ourselves, our time, our energy, our caring to others, then before very long, we are going to wonder whether it is worth it; we are going to wonder whether anything of value or meaning is going to come from our efforts.

We will wonder that because we will notice, and quite quickly, that a whole lot of what we do is wasted. Nothing much comes of it.

Hold onto that thought, we will come back to it after another look at the parable.

The first people who heard this parable, knew about a sower going out to sow. They saw it happen, they did it, year after year. They knew that seed was usually sown by broadcasting it. That is, the farmer would walk along and toss it out in every which direction. The land was ploughed later, after it had been sown. This meant that when you were tossing out the seed, it was virtually impossible to tell what sort of soil it was landing on. It all looked pretty much the same from the point of view of the one who was out there sowing.

So, everything that Jesus said about the problems of thin soil, rocks, fat birds, thorns, weeds, and anything else that might get in the way, this was all old news to them. That was the way it always worked. Much, probably most, of what you sowed was wasted, they knew that.

If the important part of this parable were about soils, and the difficulties that come with planting anything, and the dangers involved, and that the seeds would be wasted, then there was no big deal here at all. There was nothing new or interesting in it, the folks listening already knew all about that.

However, there is one thing that was really shocking to the first people who heard this parable. And that was the yield, the harvest. Seven or eight-fold was hoped for. Ten-fold was phenomenal, and anything above that was simply unheard of.

And yet here Jesus speaks of a harvest – a hundred, sixty or thirty times what was sown.

Even the poorest yield in the parable was beyond their experience and the greatest almost beyond comprehension.

To promise this sort of result was more than optimistic, it was to live in a whole different order of creation; it was to operate out of a whole different vision.

To sow with this sort of hope and vision is to have the perspective of the Kingdom of God. With this vision you don't mind the rocks, or the birds, or the thin soil, or whatever else may get in the way. All of that just doesn't matter. It is swallowed up in the promise of the whole enterprise. This perspective, the promise of a vast harvest, is the heart of this little parable.

After all, we already know that much of what we do is wasted. We already know what it is like to try and try and try to care and to make a difference and to not get anywhere, or not be noticed, or not succeed, or (perhaps worst of all) not even be appreciated. If the parable is about that, then it doesn't have much new or interesting to say to us, either.

But if the one of the points of the parable is that, by the grace of God, the harvest will be beyond measure, great beyond belief, great beyond imagining. That what God will make of our efforts is more than we can imagine, then, though much will be wasted, that's all right.

And the one who sows, that's us, doesn't need to worry about that. The one who sows is simply called to scatter the seed, to love and to serve and to trust. The rest will be taken care of. This is not because of our abilities; it is because of the power of God.

This perspective of hope and confidence is the gift of the parable. There is a carefree abandon in this image. We are to love and to serve in broadcast fashion, knowing full well that most of what we do won't amount to anything, but trusting, none the less, in the incomprehensible abundance of the harvest.

Certainly, much will be wasted, at least as we see it. Maybe even our very favourite seed, our best, most self-sacrificing good deed, our most convincing argument, our greatest insight, will end up on a rocky path, or inside some fat bird. But that is not ours to control' it is not ours to fix; it is not even ours to worry about.

Each one of us individually, and as a church, all of us together, have at our feet, fields to walk and seed to sow. We are called to do that.

This parable is a gift to lighten our step and extend our reach. It gives us the wonderful gift of perspective. So, we can wave at the birds and smile at the weeds, they are not our concern.

For the love we offer in the Lord's name, is the word of the Kingdom of God. And that word, God promises, will not return to God empty, but it shall accomplish that which God intends for it; and it will prosper in the things for which it is sent.

Thanks be to God. Amen

School Friends

The friendship of our schooldays linger strangely in the mind - after we have left the world of childhood far behind. Though we make new ties as through the years our lives advance, changing with the buffeting of time and circumstance.

A friendship of those early days will sometimes live and last - remaining when the friendships of the later years have passed. We are hurt and disillusioned when affections cool - and fall back on that dear old friend : the friend we made at school.

Pet Of The Month for August

ROSY

I met the very beautiful Rosy when she was out for a walk with her mum, Sheila, in Nayland one morning.

Rosy had a wonderful temperament and was very happy to stand and have her photo taken.

Sheila has had Rosy for two and a half years and she is the second dog Sheila and her husband have rescued.

This time last year we were basking in 40-degree heat, struggling to keep plants alive in the gardens and greenhouses, the lawns green and lush and ourselves hydrated. What a difference 12 months can make, we've had more rain than we could possibly need (some people would probably argue this), storms, high winds, and weather so unpredictable that you never quite know what to wear. My heart goes out to all the people in Europe that are having to cope with extremely high temperatures and hope that it breaks soon.

The Parish Council held its regular meeting on July 17th, and it was agreed that we would go ahead with some maintenance work within the village.

The railings around the War Memorial are going to be renovated, they will be rubbed down, treated for rust and repainted.

The bus shelter is also being smartened up having the loose boards repaired and the whole thing will be treated with two coats of wood preservatives. As well as this the long grass around the sides and the back will be cut down and disposed of.

As many of you are aware other parishes make use of the unused telephone boxes in their areas to create a community library. We don't have a telephone box, but we are going to do the same thing using the bus shelter and wondered if anyone has a cupboard or cabinet that they would like to donate to us to store the books in.

We are in the process of obtaining a grant to replace the play equipment at the village play park and the plan is to remove the play equipment and to turf the area in preparation. We will let you all know the date in advance

During the first week of August there will be a presentation by the Essex, Suffolk & Norfolk Pylon Team to update the parish on the latest news regarding the pylons. As soon as the date is confirmed we will endeavour to let everyone know.

Fly tipping is fast becoming a big problem all around the country and we have had two incidents in the area during the last month. If you do see anything that has been left at the side of the road please report it on the the Colchester City Council website www.colchester.gov.uk or please report it to the Parish Council on clerk@littlehorkesleyipc.com with the full details and we can do it on your behalf.

The next Parish Council meeting will be at the Village Hall on September 18th at 19.30pm.

Tracy Le Grys - Parish Councillor.

Pylons and the Churchyard

Whether you believe or don't believe in the resurrection of the body many of our predecessors did.

So, it is with relief we hear that National Grid's latest proposal has decided to underground the cables across the view from the churchyard, leaving the landscape predominantly the same as it would have looked to a medieval resident.

Sadly, National Grid have not made any decision to offshore the grid and the undergrounding through Little Horkesley is one of the very few concessions made. The cables emerge within sight of the Little Horkesley parish boundary in the parish of Wormingford and will blight the lives of some parishioners.

I urge you on their behalf and on behalf of all the villages along the route to support the campaign to off-shore the cables.

LITTLE HORKESLEY WEATHER

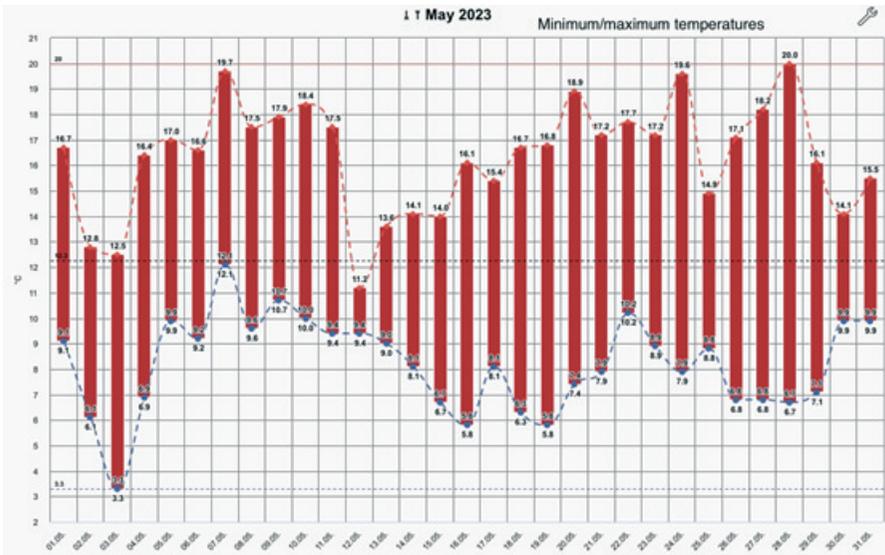

May-June 2023

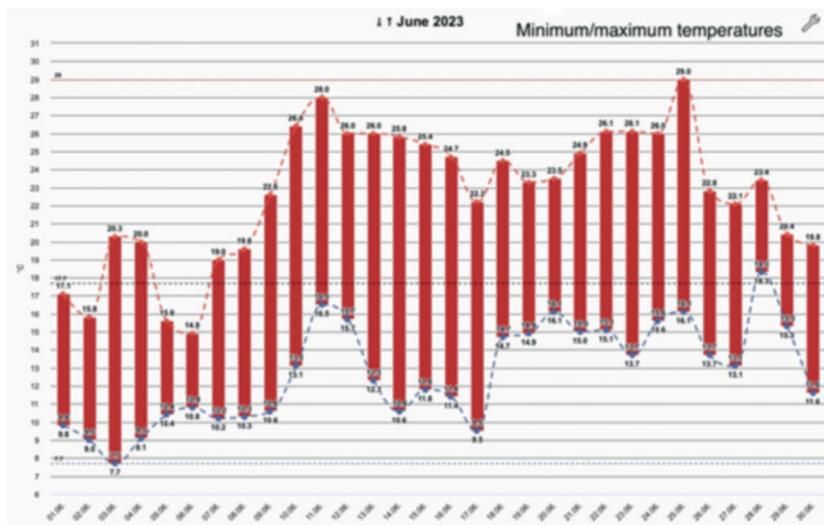

We can summarize the weather for the past two months as follows: a cool and mainly settled May and the warmest June on record.

May 2023 started with settled and fine weather followed by significant rain in the second week. After the 13th May high atmospheric pressure dominated our area with a keen North-Easterly wind which kept the temperatures below the multiannual May average and very dry conditions beyond the middle of June. We had again a long spell of nearly 5 weeks of no rain, which is becoming a characteristic of the climate of our past few years (April 2017, June 2018, May 2020, April 2021, July 2022).

June began with temperatures around average but from the 9th it became warm and humid with higher-than-average daytime temperatures. You probably heard that the UK wide mean June temperature was 15.8° C (60.4° F), which is 2.5° C above average, making it the warmest June in a series from 1884. It was definitely the warmest June in Little Horkesley with a mean temperature of 18.5° C, three degrees higher than June 2022. It was one of the sunniest June on record as well according to the Met Office. High pressure and dominant winds from the North-East again were responsible for the lack of precipitation and sunny conditions during this period.

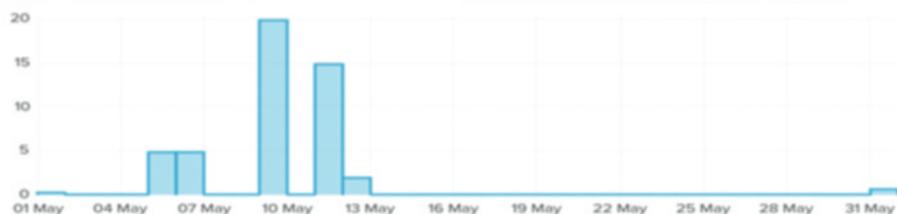

Rainfall was well below average (only 27mm) and it came in the third week of the month culminating with a serious downpour on the 29th with half of the month's precipitation falling on that day.

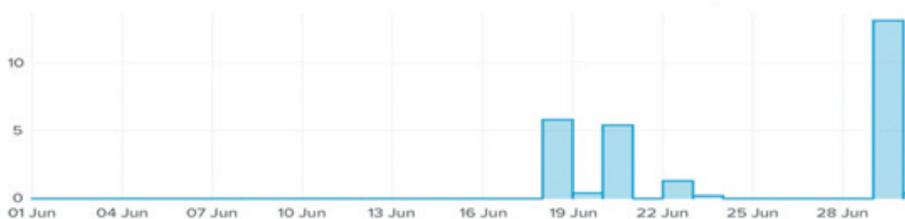

RAIN - RAIN SENSOR

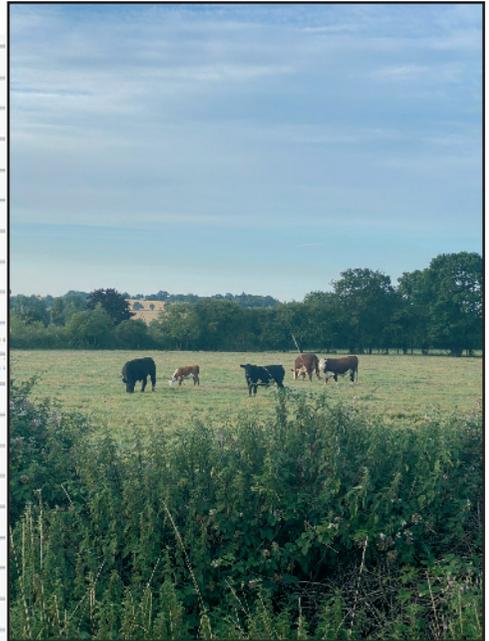

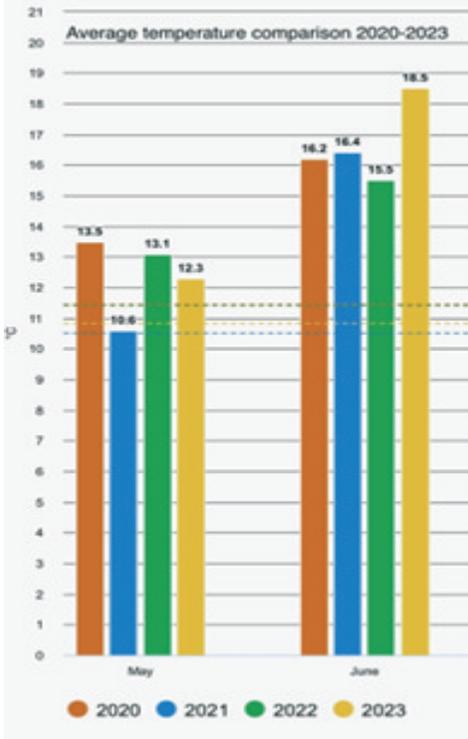

Accumulated over the period: 46.9 mm

Charlie is looking for a Forever Home

I am currently fostering this handsome chap, and after a bit of R&R, he is ready to go off to a Forever Home.

Charlie is a 10-year-old neutered, black and white moggy with huge round eyes. He is gentle, sweet, has a lovely little purr and loves head strokes.

Sadly, Charlie's previous home was quite abusive towards him which has made him shy and very wary of people and loud noises. His ideal home would be rural, with patient owners, no young children or other house pets.

Charlie has lived with us for about six weeks now and it took about four weeks for him to feel comfortable enough to come out of his room to wander the house. He even spends time exploring the garden.

If you think you might be interested in adopting Charlie or want more information, please get in touch with me either by phone on 07854 602633 or email suzanne.albert@gmail.com

Thank you. Suzanne

Celebrating the life of Ronnie Blythe and unveiling the plaque

The one thing that came to mind as I drove slowly along the pot filled drive towards Bottengoms on Sunday June 18th was, how much I missed it.

Without the ceaseless march of the Ronnettes driving there and back more than three times a day, the verges are much more overgrown, scraping my car as I went. Still, I got emotional and stopped half-way down, just to stand, quietly, observe and take in everything that Ronnie loved about this beautiful part of our world. The birds in the trees, the horses in the field above, the insects in the hedgerow – no different really to the noises in my own garden, but here, with my eyes closed, they were so much more.

I was already late, and I was dithering. I know Ronnie would have understood and even approved, but I was late! When I finally arrived at the open door of Bottengoms with apologies on my lips, I was saddened to hear that my tardiness meant that I'd missed most of Alan Cudmore's reading of a John Taylor poem. Despite the interruption, Alan carried on to finish, like a professional.

Afterwards, the welcoming embrace of Ian and my fellow Ronnettes was like a warm blanket, I felt at home, I became emotional again. I'd missed them so.

It had started to rain, but once all our glasses were full we went outside for the unveiling of the plaques. Ian donned Ronnie's straw boater hat and gave a brief speech before unveiling the John and Christine Nash plaque that had been cleaned up and resited. Then the straw boater was handed to Vikkie to don, who gave her own speech before unveiling the new Ronald Blythe plaque. Many discussions and opinions had gone into the designing of the plaque for Ronnie and we were all delighted with the final product. Both plaques now adorn Bottengoms, sitting side by side (photos on pages 24 & 25)

Afterwards, we all escaped back into the warm comfort of the house to eat canapés, drink plenty of fizz, reminisce and catch up with friends. Ronnie would have loved to have seen all his Dear Ones together in his house once more. I keep my fingers crossed that we can get together again soon.
